

Feng Shui Transition ...from Summer to Fall

Everyone must take time to sit and watch the leaves turn.
~Elizabeth Lawrence

While the days are still very warm, the cool evenings and mornings signal the long anticipated arrival of Fall! This transition time leads us away from Summer's fire yang element to a more slow, deep and inward (yin) time of Fall (metal) which is also preparation for more of the same in winter (water)! Nature is ready to shed her leaves and so you will be able to let go of the past! After the summer solstice, get ready to spend more time indoors and organize in ways that will help you be warm and cozy!

Organize your desk, nurture your self and clean kitchen, generally de-clutter and discard! Get busy with the cycle of Fall de-cluttering, space-clearing, garage sales, pruning gardens, and harvesting the bounty!

Get your pantry stocked, organize grains, prepare your home for the Fall holidays, make homemade soups and warm up your body by switching to warmer, cooked yang foods to balance your ch'i to counter the yin of cooler seasons.

Light candles to inspire you in your Fall endeavors, aromatically nurture your space for a cozy feel and try to warm up your environment with Fall home décor accents in tones of amber, pumpkin, and crimson ... with stylish throws ready for chilly evenings.

Spend time observing the cycles of the season and use Feng Shui to balance and strengthen your home. In doing so, our homes become a sanctuary, a comforting refuge; to reflect our highest motivations, intentions and dreams, as well as protecting us from the long cold evenings of the cooler seasons!

Make room for the new and donate all finished summer reading to your local library, go through and switch closets to warmer clothes in advance of freezing temps, flip mattresses, replace emergency water supply, check car and tires, replenish light bulb supply, throw away old medicines and vitamins.

Remember to also get adequate exercise to avoid putting on those seasonal pounds. Incorporate daily outdoor walks, get a good night's sleep, and remain steadfast with your contemplative practices ... for an inner glow that will warm your own heart and those you love around you!
